Capture of Delhi.

-Atlantic Monthly.

The city of Delhi, the stronghold of the mutineers, which had been besieged by the British for three months, was taken by them on the 20th of September. The details of this important event, so far as they were known in England, are given in a letter to the London Times, from Bombay, Oct. 3d, from which we make the following extracts: we make the following extracts:-

At length I am able to announce to you the fall of At length I am able to announce to you the fall of the revolted capital of North-Western India, or, if that appellation be not strictly correct, of the ancient chief city of the Mogul empire, in which a faithless soldiery had sought to re-creet the independent throne of the descendant of Baber. Delhi is once more in possession of the British. Our information at present is more scanty than could be desired, owing partly to the dawk communication being unluckily intercepted between Lahore and Mooltan. But the main facts have reached us from so many quarters as to leave no doubt whatever that the place was assaulted with success on the 14th of September, when a permanent lodgment was effected, that during the four or five following days further advances and acquisitions on the city were made, and that finally on the 20th the whole of the space enclosed within the walls was in our possession. I should observe, however, that we have not received as yet such certain evidence of the Residency at Jeypore in Rajpootana, which reached Lord Elphinstone by way of Ahmedabad yesterday. Lord Elphinstone by way of Ahmedabad yesterday. It is dated at Jeypore on the evening of the 23d, and is to the effect that the news had just been received at the Residency both from the Nawab of Jhujur, to whom it may be presumed to have been forwarded by his master, a chief resident in the immediate neighborhood of Delhi. Thus the tidings of our ultimate and complete success rest at present on native authority only, but as the natural sequel and complement of our undoubted triumph of the 14th they are univer-After giving the details of the siege from the 1st to the 14th of September, the letter says:

On the morning of the 14th, soon after day-break, the assault took place. The attacking columns were—as I gather from a letter that I have seen, written on the following day by an officer of rank in the army, which, though short, is as far as I know, the only communication of so late a date that has as yet reached Bombay—three in number, one being held, as I understand it, in reserve. Their strength is not as I understand it, in reserve. Their strength is not given. The main point of assault was the breach at the Cashmere hastion. One column, however, consisting of Ghoorkas and the newly arrived Jummoo contingent, was directed to make a diversion by attacking the Kishengunge suburb, which lies outside the Lahore gate on the western side of the city, and, if it succeeded in carrying the suburb, to assault the gate itself. But the suburb was occupied by the enemy in force, with a battery of heavy guns. The Cashmerian troops behaved indifferently, and in spite of the efforts of the brave Ghoorkas, the column was repulsed. Its commanding officer, Major Reid, of the repulsed. Its commanding officer, Major Reid, of the Sirmoor battalion, is among the wounded of the day; but on the northern side of the city all went well. The troops entered at the breach with no serious op-position, and spreading to the left and right, occupied the "whole line of defences from the Water bastion to the Cabul gate, including the Cashmere gate and bastion, the Moore gate and bastion, the English bastion, the Moore gate and bastion, the English church, Skinner's house, and the grounds about."

The principal loss sustained by the assailants was due to the obstinate resistance they met with in clearing their way along the ramparts to the Cabul gate, and afterwards in an attempt to penetrate beyond that point into the denser parts of the city in the direction of the Jumna Musjid. In all, the loss amounted to about 500 killed and wounded. Five that point into the denser parts of the city in the direction of the Junna Musjid. In all, the loss amounted to about 500 killed and wounded. Five officers are reported to have been slain. Of the loss of the mutineers I do not observe even an estimate. It is only suid that bodies of them were seen to be retreating both to the south of the city in the direction of Kootab, and also across the bridge of boats, and that our cavalry had moved round the city to intercept and destroy the former. Our victorious Infantry, prudently recalled from too hasty an advance into the close lanes of the city, occupied the comparatively open space inside the Cashmere gate, and the walls which they had won upon either side of it. Headquarters were established in the house once occupied by the renowned Dregular Horseman, Skinner, and now known to us by his name, to the natives as Secunder's. Preparations were at once made for shelling the enemy out of the Palace, the Selinghur, and the other strong places of the city, and firing commenced next morning, the 15th. By the evening of that day, a breach was effected in the wall of the magazine enclosure, which was held in force by the enemy, and the place was stormed the next morning by the 61st Foot, and detachments of the Beeloch battation and Wilde's Rifles. In it were captured 125 pieces of cannon. The Palace being now well exposed, the guns and mortars opened upon it from the magazine enclosure, and the enemy appears to have fallen back at all points. Thus the Kishengunge battery, which had repulsed the Jummoo troops, was abandoned and occupied, and the guns there taken swelled the total number of captured pieces to upwards of 200. The battery on the further side of the river seems also to have been abandoned, and at the date of the latest certain and official news—7 p. m. on the 26th—an attack upon the magazine had been repulsed, a chain of posts had been established from the Cabul gate to the magazine, and the enemy, some hours before dayfall, had been maintaining only a detached

A postscript to this letter gives the operations on the 17th and 18th as follows:—
On the 17th, shelling the Lal Killa [Red Fort;

hur] and city. Fighting all day, leaders and native officers in open dissension, accusing one another, in presence of the King, of cowardice. In the end presence of the King, of cowardice. In the end unanimity prevailed, and they resolved to attack and fight as men without hope of mercy or pardon.

Friday, the 18th. Shelling all night on the Lal Killa. This morning fighting recommenced, and mutineers on some points successful, but constantly repulsed. Rifles doing much mischief among the rebels. City people, both rich and poor, running away. Suburbs, where Reid failed (the Kishengunge) is ours, and also the rebels' battery there. King and two some concealed. One bastion of the Lal Killa destroyed, and it will be taken. Capt. Eden adds—The above is from the Durbar news writer to the Rajah at Jeypore. There may be some enaggeration, but in the main I am inclined to believe this report, as the man has always sent us correct reports on the whole. After this the report of the total occupation of the city on the 20th may be accepted unhesitatingly.

The King of Dalhi and his two sons escaped dis-

At Agra all was quiet. Fears were entertained of a new outbreak at Assam Fears were entertained of a new outbreak at Assam.

A conspiracy to restore the ex-Rajah had been detected. One hundred and fifty prisoners taken by General Neill at Cawnpore, are said to have been liberated by the government. It is also said that the Supreme Council had sent up to the disturbed districts one of its members to control the generals in command, in the execution of martial law. The leniency of the government was strongly condemned both in India and England.

and England.

The intelligence from the Bombay Presidency is favorable, though a few cases of disaffection had occurred in the army in Scinde. At Kurrachee, the 21st Bombay Native Infantry had been disarmed, and about twenty men of the regiment had been convicted of a serious plot to murder all the Europeans, and executed. At Hyderabad, in the same province, a company of native artillery had been disarmed.

The whole of the northeast frontier is said to be in a disturbed state.

The mutineers of the Joudpore Legion defeated the Rajah of Joudpore's troops, killing the general and taking three guns, on the 9th of September; they then joined the rebellious Thakcor of Arrah. General Lawrence proceeded, on the 18th September, with a detachment from Behar, and attacked the rebels. He compelled them to take refuge in the town of Gaya, but found the place too strong for an assault to be risked, and accordingly fell back on Behar.

Benares, Sept. 13.—A letter from General Outram, dated Kurreem, Sept. 11, states—"I have just received a note from Cawnpore of this date, from which I extract the following: "We had good news from Lucknow yesterday—a fierce cannonade at gun-fire, and towards noon the enemy exploded a mine, but by some mischance it went off just under the feet of those advancing to attack, killing, it is said, nearly

The Liverpool Mercury gives the following summary of the late news:—
Our great triumph of the 20th of September—a day which will now be doubly memorable in the annals of British valor—was not achieved an hour too soon. It is evident, from the general tenor of the news brought by the present mail, that difficulties and perils were multiplying and thickening upon us; and had the rebellion held its ground at Delhi but a few weeks longer, the consequences might have been in-calculably disastrous. It is increasingly apparent calculably disastrous. It is increasingly apparent that the fidelity of the Bombay army was rapidly giving way under the temptations presented by the prolonged success and impunity of the Bengal Sepoys. Though the Presidency itself (as well as that of Madras) continued tranquil, the Bombay troops stationed in Scinde were clearly no longer to be depended upon. At Kurrachee, Hyderabad, (not to be confounded with the place of the same name in the Nizam's dominions,) Shikarpore, and elsewhere, plots had been discovered, regiments disarmed, and conspirators and mutineers executed.

There seems no reason to doubt that the authorities were well able to hold their own in that quarter; but truth of the latter part of this story as of that of the former. The proceedings of the 14th, 15th and 10th are known to us, however, compendiously from the official bulletins issued by the Chief Commissioner at Lahore, and founded, as you know, on telegraphic messages from Delhi. But of the final occupation on the 20th we have only heard by an express from the break. The mutineers of the Joudpore Legion have seized the little town of Gaya, and hold it in defiance of us; and we are told of similar acts of successful audacity committed elsewhere by other bodies of insurgents. Malwa is reported as disturbed. The mutineers of the Gwalior Contingent are said to have crossed the Chumbul, together with some of the Mhow and Indore rebels, and to have been threatening Agra. In Behar we hear of the Ramgur insurgents having interrupted the communications below Benares. Even from the extreme east of Assam we have vague rumors of conspiracy barely kept from exploding. Altogether it is but too plain that rebellion was gaining both in numbers and daring. It is undoubtedly true that time was fighting in our favor, but it was also at many points fighting against us. We cannot be sufficiently thankful that the insurgents have at length received a signal and decisive proof of the irresistible might of England, and of the blank and utter MELAINOTYPES, Or Pictures on Enameled Iron Plates, a New and Beautiful Improvement in PHOTOGRAPHY.

THE UNDERSIGNED would respectfully call the attention of the public to the above named style of pic tures, a recent and invaluable improvement in the art of sun drawing. In richness of tone and warmth of expression, these pictures are not surpassed by any other kind, while, in regard to durability, there is no question as to their superiority; for they will receive a fall without fracture or injury, and may be washed when soiled. Hence, they may be sent by letter, without glass or case, to absent friends, at a very trifting expense for postage.

All the latest styles of photographic pictures have been introduced and may be obtained at this gallery, finished in a superior manner, insuring likeness and durability; and arrangements have been completed with EMINENT ARTISTS in California and the east, to introduce at once any late improvements or new features of practical importance in the art.

Photographs on Paper taken by the dozen and half dozen, and pictures and paintings copied, either by the half dozen, and pictures and paintings copied, either by the improved Ambrotype or Daguerreotype process. Also, likenesses inserted into lockets, pins, bracelets, &c. Photographic views of parts of the city, public buildings, &c., for sale.

Complete Daguerreotype Apparatus, fixtures and stock, for sale, and instruction given to persons desirous of visiting other
